

Giving Breastmilk Body Ethics and Contemporary Breastfeeding Practice

edited by Rhonda Shaw and Alison Bartlett

"This is an excellent book that is coherent and theoretically strong. The authorship is diverse yet highly appropriate. The book follows a logical sequence and represents an advance in the social science of breastfeeding. It is likely to be of interest to academics in the fields of anthropology, sociology and women's studies. It will also appeal to breastfeeding specialists, midwives and other health professionals working with breastfeeding women."

—Fiona Dykes, Professor of Maternal and Infant Health, Director of Maternal and Infant Nutrition and Nurture Unit (MAINN), University of Central Lancashire, England

"Giving Breastmilk is a welcome addition to contemporary scholarship on mothering. It offers an innovative approach—instead of polemical or 'how to' books, here is a collection of thoughtful and interesting discussions that take the production of breastmilk and the process of breastfeeding seriously as complex and invaluable social practices. The book will make a major interdisciplinary contribution to understanding women's mothering experience and practice, to public health discourse and to general knowledge of breastmilk and feeding.

—Kerreen Reiger, Associate Professor of Sociology, La Trobe University, Australia, and author of Our Bodies Our Babies: the Forgotten Women's Movement journals.
